"I was first diagnosed with dyslexia at the age of seven. I did an IQ test, they put a lot of puzzles in front of me, and I had to color things and mark charts.

School for me was just a lot of extra work, a lot of extra classes, a lot of frustration and sometimes screaming at whoever it was that was making me feel like I wasn't good enough."

"With dyslexia comes a very great gift, which is the way that your mind can think creatively.

Never let anyone tell you that you're not capable. We're all the same, we're all equal and we all deserve a shot. It takes having obstacles to learn and grow and be better."
